The HAMILTON Surname

Hamilton From Book on Surnames, by Susa Young Gates (1918): Genealogical writers like Air Robert Douglas and other affirm that the Hamiltons derive their origin from the Norman race of De Bello Monte, Earl of Leicester, through the Lords of the Manor of Hambleton. Hamilton County Lanark, from which many Scotsmen directly derive their surname, was Hamilton as early as 1290; previously it was Cadyow (Or Cadzow). Of all of the illustrious European families there is perhaps not one with a more enviable record than this old Scottish family of Hamilton. This ancestral line coming down with all its many auxiliaries, through not less than thirty generations, compares with, if it does not excel any other in either Europe or America for antiquity, dignity and personal achievement. As orators and statesmen they have had few equals, not a few of them were men of library, artistic and poetical genius. The reliable, brilliant and sturdy Scotch characteristics have been handed down in the Hamilton family through many successive generations. There is scarcely a clan in all history than can point with more justifiable pride to so many titled and eminent members. The Hamilton noblemen are legion, ranking in all grades of titles: Lords, Dukes, peers, Marquises, Earls, Viscounts, and Barons. There are few families whose lineage can be authentically traced to a more remote origin, going back as far as the year 1000 the descent is carried down in an almost unbroken line to the present generation. This descent is authentically traced from the Duke of Normandy, father of William the Conqueror, down through the Beaumonts, the three cinquefoils of the Beaumont crest being still used of the Hamilton coat of arms. The Beaumonts were the Earls of Leicestershire through the Lords of Manor of Hamilton in the country of Leicester. They were ancestors of Sir Walter Fitz Gilbert. This man was the first clearly authentic ancestor of the Hamiltons, he makes his first appearance on the pages of history as a witness to a charter. This Sir Gilbert de Hameldone was a favorite with Robert de Bruce, then King of Scotland, was advanced by Bruce and became Baron of Cadzowds, through Bruce held lands and his descendants were made members of parliament; this Hameldone, or Hamilton, had the honor of delivering the funeral oration upon the death of Robert de Bruce. The charter above referred to, of which Sir Gilbert de Hameldone was a witness, was granted on December 12, 1272, by Thomas Cragyer to the monks of Paisley. In referring to a book entitled A Scots Peerage, by John Anderson, Vol, IV, page 340, we read that in a charter of 12th of December, 1272, by Thomas Cragyer (or Craigie) to the monks of Paisley of his church of Craigie in Kyle there appears as witness a certain Gilbert de Hameldun clerics, whose name occurs along with local clergy of Iverkipp, Blackhall, Paisley and Dunoon. He was therefore also a cleric, probably of the same neighborhood, and it is significant that Walter Fitz Gilbert appears first in that district in 1294 and in 1296 is described as the son of Gilbert de Hameldone. The ancestral line is carried down through John, the son of Walter Fitz Gilbert, then this John's son Alexander, then Alexander's son Thomas, then through the grandson of this Thomas who was in favor with Queen Mary and became Lord Priestfield. Lord Priestfield's eldest son, Thomas, became Alord of session as early as 1592 and was afterward made Earl of Haddington. The Encyclopedia Britannica, Vol. 12, page 878, says: It is interesting to note that the fifth Earl of Haddington, by his marriage with Lady Margaret Lestie, brought for a time the earldom of Rothes to the Hamiltons to be to their already numerous titles. The through line of Hamiltons was carried down by Sir David Fitz Walter Fitz Gilbert. He was a baron in parliament in 1371-1373, then his son, another Sir David, carried the line down in the family. This last Sir David Hamilton, who was Lord of Cadzow, left four sons, the descent comes down through his eldest son. Sir John Hamilton of Cadzow, through Sir John's eldest son, Sir James Hamilton, of Cadzow, then through the eldest son of James, Sir Thomas Hamilton of Cadzow. This Sir Thomas was Lord Hamilton, having inherited his title which was confirmed in 1445. Through this Sir Thomas there was made an alliance of the Hamilton and Douglass families by his marriage with Euphemia, widow of the fifth earl of Douglass. Sir Thomas later married, in 1474, Mary, sister of King James III: she was the widow of Thomas Boyd, earl of Arran. Elsewhere in this volume will be found an illustration of the coat of arms of the allied families of Hamilton and Arran. This Sir Thomas Hamilton and his royal wife, Mary, had a son, James, who was the second Lord Hamilton who received the earldom of Arran on the 8th of August, 1503. Sir James Hamilton, the second earl of Arran, was the son of the Lord Hamilton and his second wife, Janet Beaton. Sir James held this earldom until 1554, but previous to this, in 1549, he was granted the duchy of Chatellernault, in France. His third son, Claude, Duke of Abercorn, was male heir of the house of Hamilton. Sir Claude was made a lord of parliament as Lord Paisley in 1587. He had five sons, three of whom settled in Ireland and became progenitors of the Scotch-Irish Hamiltons, thus it will be seen that Sir Claude Hamilton, Lord Paisley, was the ancestor of the Hamiltons who migrated from Ireland to America more than a hundred years later than the time of Sir Claude of Scotland. The different Hamilton families in America, some generations back, were of pure Scottish blood, but came to this country from diverse British localities. Several regions of Scotland supplying representatives by that name and their cousins coming from northern Ireland representing the sturdy, dependable, Scotch-Irish Presbyterian stock. Many of the Hamiltons in America, therefore, must go back beyond the Atlantic to connect their relationship. Pages could be written on the achievements of the different illustrious men by the name of Hamilton, both in America and Great Britain. However, the above is sufficient to connect the line from the earliest records to the present generation. Transcript from a letter written from the Hotel Great Central, London, July 2, 1926, by the writer to her husband, Lucius Oliver Hamilton I, of Indianapolis: I learned much about the Hamilton clan while in Edinburgh. The Royal Palace there, Hollyrood Palace, which was the residence of Scottish royalty as long as Scotland had royalty and is still the stopping place of England's King and Queen whenever they are in Edinburgh, is most interesting. The Duke of Hamilton has a very elegant room in the Palace containing a most luxuriant old canopied bed of such height and massiveness one wonders a ceiling could be high enough to accommodate such a stately piece of furniture. The rich velvet hangings on this bed are marvels of elegance. On the walls are hung interesting old paintings and most beautiful Flemish tapestries. Our guide gave us some very interesting information concerning this room and how it was acquired by a Duke of Hamilton, an honor won in 1633 by a Duke of Hamilton (James) in payment of a gambling debt, as a consequence of his large winnings when gambling with the King, Charles I. Since that time the Hamiltons have been keepers of the Palace, coming and going at will, not even the present king, after this agreement made by Charles I with the Duke of Hamilton, can prevent a Hamilton from entering the Palace whenever he may choose to do so. Had I known all this, prior to our visit to the Palace, I should have asserted my legal rights and not have permitted myself to stand impatiently waiting at the entrance until ten o'clock when the doorkeeper appeared at the stroke of the hour to admit us. Well aware that some things told by guides may be taken with a grain of salt and wishing to be accurate in my statements, I wrote, In Aug 1927, to D G Jones of Eddinburgh, warden of Hollyrood Palace, for correct information. His reply, written 13 Sep 1927, confirmed the facts as I have them here.

In the early part of the eighteenth century there lived in northern Ireland a family of Hamiltons of Scotch-Irish blood, descendants of Sir Claude Hamilton of Scotland. In this family there were two sons. John and William, perhaps other children. One of these boys, having plucked a rose from the King's garden, incurred the displeasure of the King, causing his banishment from England. As a result of this banishment the brothers took a ship for America. On shipboard they met a young miss named Elizabeth. John became enamored with this Elizabeth and after landing at Baltimore, these two were married. This is the same John and Elizabeth who are the ancestors of the Hamilton family whose lineage is partially traced in this volume, and this same John became a sergeant in the Revolutionary War under Captain Isaac Seeley. In the spring of the year 1795, four sons of Sergeant John Hamilton, John Jr, Edward, Samuel, and David left their homes in Lancaster, _____, PA, came down the Ohio River on a flatboat and landed on the northern bank of the river at Fort Washington, later a town called Losantville on this site, on ground where Cincinnati is now located. These brothers and their companions built, in connection with Fort Washington, a large stockade which covered about five acres of ground, enclosing between fifteen and twenty cabins, in which to protect themselves and their families against the Indians. In December of the same year the wives and children of these Hamilton brothers made a similar trip down the Ohio in a flatboat, arriving at Fort Washington 14 Dec 1795. The wife of Edward Hamilton brought with her a little two year old son, named John Cornelius, born in Pennsylvania, 5 Jan 1794. Three days after the arrival of the wives and children at Fort Washington, the wife of Edward gave birth to another son, 17 Dec, naming him Samuel born in the stockade, a fact which brought him local notoriety. John Cornelius was the father of Oliver Theodore Hamilton I, and grandfather of Lucius Oliver Hamilton I. The baby brother Samuel was the first child born in the stockade and the first white child born in that locality, so his father and mother claimed. He was, so far as their information extended. Edward Hamilton, father of John Cornelius, owned one hundred and sixty acres of land where the city of Cincinnati now stands. On this land he built a cabin back next to the hill, at the location of what is now the head of Central Avenue. He lived in this cabin eleven years. He then sold his farm for a wagon, a team of horses and two hundred dollars in money and then moved from there up on the Little Miami River, near where Loveland is now located. He remained at this place only two years when he sold the land he owned there and moved to Bracken County, KY. He had heard many wonderful stories from his father and Philip Buckner of Bracken County, of the pure water, fine springs, healthful climate, fine hunting of deer and wild turkeys and the fertility of the soil, and decided to move his family thither. Before Edward Hamilton moved to Kentucky from Ohio he went back north and twenty-five miles, accompanied by other surveyors, and laid out the town of Hamilton, now the city of Hamilton, in Butler County. The city was named for him and not for Alexander Hamilton, as later some historians claim. Hamilton County, Ohio, was also named for these Hamilton brothers. They were influential pioneers in this locality, enduring the hardships and privations of such as were the leading influence in pioneer work and to them should go the credit due them, the naming for them of the city and county of Hamilton. It is matter of deep regret that records of all these things were burned in Cincinnati when the old courthouse was destroyed by fire. Before leaving Ohio, Edward Hamilton's eldest son, John Cornelius, carried the United States mail on horseback through the forest from Cincinnati to Dayton. At that time he was a lad of about thirteen years. Only four years later, when scarcely seventeen years of age, he married Elizabeth Black in Kentucky. His oldest child was born just before the father was eighteen years of age. Some years before these four sons of John Hamilton left Pennsylvania, their father and Philip Buckner made a trip on horseback from the Shenandoah Valley into Kentucky. These two were the first white men to set foot on Bracken County soil. They came to look over Buckner's land grant of twenty-eight thousand acres on the south side of the Ohio River, and eleven thousand acres on the north side of the Ohio River. Bracken County records say Hamilton and Buckner were fast friends. Deed Book A, page 6, Bracken County Records, states that John Hamilton, Sr, came to Bracken County before 1797 in a wagon from the Shenandoah Valley, Virginia. Although he was in Kentucky previous to this time, this must have been the time when he moved his family to Kentucky. This date, 1797, is given because it is the first date in the records where he signed a deed. After coming to Kentucky, both Buckner and Hamilton built cabins about six miles back from the Ohio River near the center of the land grant. The cabins were built about one mile east of the present site of Chatham, and northeast of Germantown, Mason County. It was about 1806 when Edward Hamilton came to Bracken County to live. At one time there were between seven and eight hundred people by the name of Hamilton living in Bracken County, those of each generation marrying and usually rearing large families. In migrating to Kentucky, these Hamilton men selected the garden spots of Bracken County for their home, not that they were looking especially for good land, but rather because of the good springs of water and abundant game. They located about thirty miles from the Blue Licks on foot, where they would spend two weeks boiling down the water from the springs. At the end of that time each would have a small sack of salt to carry home on his shoulder, enough to supply the family for one year. At the springs there were large iron kettles in which the water was boiled down into salt, these kettles were free for the use of any one needing them. Who it was originally supplied these kettles for public use I am unable to say, but any and all were to use them, first come, first served. These Hamilton brothers, born in Pennsylvania, sojourned in Ohio and finally settling in Kentucky were in every sense sturdy pioneers. Their first achievement after reaching Kentucky, was to cut logs and build homes for their families. In their earlier days their families were supported largely by hunting. The skins of all animals killed were carefully preserved and tanned, making leather for moccasins, gloves, caps, hunting jackets, and leggings, indeed were put to every imaginable use. The caps worn by the men were usually coon skin, with the tail of the animal hanging from the back of the cap. Sometimes caps were made from the skins of other animals but the coon skin was most commonly used for that Purpose. The white men learned from the Indians how to care for and tan animal skins. A hide to be made into leather was laid out flat with the fur side up, it was then covered with an inch thickness of ashes, the ashes were then moistened, after a time the hair would be eaten loose, and could be easily rubbed off and the hide was ready for tanning. Groundhog hide, properly tanned, made stronger leather strings and laces than the hide of any other animal, for this reason harness laces, shoe strings, and strings for any purpose, including those to tie the iron wedges into the hominy pounder were made from groundhog hide. It was such strings the Indians used on their bow to shoot the arrows. One of the instruments used in their homes that was characteristic of the early days was the hominy block. These were made from an oak log about three feet in length. It was first sheltered from the weather for at least a year until it was thoroughly seasoned and became almost as hard as flint, then a hopper was made in the upper end by burning it out with hot coals, then scraping it out. This process was repeated until a circular hole in the form of a basin was made large enough to pound a half of a bushel of corn into hominy. A seasoned hickory pounder was made about three feet long similar to the modern baseball bat minus the knob on the end. This was large at the base, with the top smoothed into a handle and was used as we use a potato masher. With this the corn was pounded into the desired coarseness for hominy. In later years when the men possessed iron wedges for splitting wood, the lower end of this pounder was split and the sharp end of an iron wedge was inserted, it was then securely tied with leather strings made from groundhog hide and held securely in place so the wedge would not be further imbedded into the handle. The heavy flat end of the iron wedge was then the instrument used to crack the corn. This all sounds easy enough, but the cracking of this corn was a laborious job; many a person has suffered a severe backache as a result of such labor. The primitive method for making corn meal was done in the same way. A sieve was made of leather stretched tightly over a hoop, the leather being first perforated full of tiny holes, usually made with an awl; through these holes the meal was sifted and then used for making hoe cake. All meal too coarse to shake through the sieve was repounded until it was necessary fineness to sift through. Would it interest readers to learn what constituted a hoe cake? Meal was mixed with water to the desired consistency of a thick batter, then seasoned with salt. A hoe was brought in and the long handle removed. The hoe was then greased with bear grease; on top of this grease the thick batter was spread evenly entirely over the outer surface of the hoe. The hoe with the batter on it was then placed before the fire, propping it up at a slant. As soon as the outside of the cake was done it was turned over and the other side was cooked in the same manner. When once a person was fond of this variety of bread none other ever tasted so rich and sweet, and best of all it was very healthful. Johnnycake was made in this same fashion except it was baked on a Johnnycake board, a wooden slab an inch or more thick, made and kept for this special purpose. The rendered fat of bear meat was used in cooking, as we of today use hog lard. Only the hind quarters of bear and deer were used for food as such game was so plentiful that only the more tender parts of the animal were eaten. If the pair of hind quarters of a deer were sold they brought twenty-five cents in silver money. Deer meat was much more plentiful than money. As the forests were gradually felled and the land put under cultivation the water springs, which had been one of the alluring factors in inducing immigration to that section, slowly dried up until today there is not a spring to be found in some localities and only a few remain in all that vast region. Our Hamilton ancestors and their companion pioneers looked upon the battle with the forest as never ending; they cleared the trees away ruthlessly and were very extravagant with all kinds of timber and very wasteful of fire-wood which they burned in the immense old fireplace. Many of the fireplaces were seven feet wide and five or more feet high, capable of devouring quantities of wood, burning huge logs of beautiful timber which no one man could lift, making a big blazing fire which was a charming sight. These pioneers little dreamed that before a century could pass the day would come when such acts of wastefulness would impoverish the countryside and would be sorely regretted by posterity. As recent as only fifty years ago wood was burned as brush, to clear the land, that today we do not see one stick as good. Only the very best timber was cut into rails and firewood the rest was burned in bonfires as trash. Every farm had brush piles ready for burning which consisted of all but the best of felled timber. We should not forget the struggles of these ancestors whose hardships, through making homes in the virgin forests, never safe from prowling Indians and wild animals, whose Industry, perseverance and bravery were traits that laid the foundation for our country as it is today. To them we owe much more honor than we give, nor is the present generation, now living in ease and luxury, worthy of such a heritage.

William Mains, aged 89 years, 4 months and 12 days, died on last Friday, August 8, 1919, at his home two and one-half miles northwest of Coy, Okla., and 20 miles south of this city. He had gone to the hay field and was helping with the raking, when he suddenly sank from the rake to the ground and death ensued in a few minutes. Heart failure was evidently the immediate cause of his death. During the past few years his general condition of health had been good for one of his advanced age and he persisted in keeping busy at something. On Friday his son, Claude, warned him that he had better not undertake to try to work, but Mr Mains insisted that he was all right and he was allowed to drive the hayrake for a while. Mr. Mains had during practically his life been a hard worker. For several years past his health at times had been in a failing condition, yet he remained reasonably active to the last. Funeral services were conducted from the Christian church in this city on Friday afternoon, the pastor, Reverend J T Wheeler, being in charge. Interment was in the Coldwater cemetery. Deceased was born in Bracken County, KY, on 27 Mar 1830. He continued to live in that state until about 20 years ago, when he came west settling in this county and later just over the line in Oklahoma, where he continued to live. He had passed through many of the pioneer scenes in his native state and knew from actual experience of the difficulties and the hardships incident to pioneer life. He delighted most in out door life and in looking after the various duties about his farm he always found the greatest delight. While a resident of Kentucky about 65 years ago Mr Mains was united in marriage with Miss Lucy Bledsoe, who died about 40 years ago. Several years later Mr. Mains remarried, his second wife being Mrs. Anna Tatton, whose death occurred near this city about six years ago. Mr Mains is survived by six children, Mrs. Jacob A Younger of this county and and Mrs D G Gallaway, now of Wichita being his daughters, and Claude Mains of Coy, OK, a son. Henry Tatton of Coy is a step-son. The other surviving children live either in Kentucky or Ohio. They are: Mrs P McKinney of Lexington, KY, Theodore Mains of Germantown, KY., Mrs Anna Vosley of Cincinnati, Ohio. Two children preceded the father in death. One of them, Roland Mains, formerly lived in this city. Mr Mains was a man of strict integrity and of courteous demeanor at all times. He was an unassuming, kindly and considerate in his dealings with his fellowmen, hence he was considered a friend to all and in his death the community loses one of its best citizens. He had been a member of the Baptist church for many years. It is not given to many to live to see the changes and improvements of so many years as did Mr Mains. He witnessed much of pioneer experience and with him the hardships and, too, the joys of home building were but incidents in his long life. It was always interesting to listen to the recital by Mr Mains of his experiences in his native state over half a century ago. He belonged to that class of pioneers whose ranks are rapidly thinning and was probably the oldest man in this county or in northern Oklahoma. William is buried in Coldwater Cemetery. He has reference number 003-030865N. Obtained land in Woods Co., OK by Homestead at Coy, OK. Land description is SW1/4 Section 14, DEATH COMES TO PIONEER MOTHER - Mrs Jacob Younker Had Been a Resident of This County 60 Years. Mrs. Jacob Younker, a beloved pioneer mother who had made her home with her husband in Comanche county more than 60 years, passed away in the Comanche County Hospital Saturday afternoon, March 3, of cancer following an illness of more than a year. She had been at the hospital the past three months. Funeral services were conducted in the Methodist church in this city Tuesday afternoon, March 6, at 2:00 o'clock and were in charge of the pastor, Reverend H C Atkins. Mrs LeRoy Cline and Mrs Myri Haun sang "Face to Face" and "In the Garden," accompanied by Miss Eleanor Gregg, organist. Burial was in Crown Hill cemetery near this city. The active pallbearers were W N Parsons, Vernie White, Milton Nokes, Hosea Nimmo, Lemuel Herd and Clifford Hecht. The honorary pallbearers were W P Morton, Frank Dodson, Harry Cloud, Claude Cozad, Ralph Beeley and Victor Gates.

They came to Coldwater 6 Jan 1896, and made their home in Coldwater and Comanche county ever since. They spent a few years in Protection, moving to Coldwater in 1931. She was reared in the Baptist faith, later uniting with the Christian church in 1911. Those who knew her best knew her as a kind and loving wife, mother and grandmother, always concerned with the welfare of her family and friends. It has been said that a woman creates the atmosphere of a home, and no one ever entered Mrs Younker's home who did not feel the kindness and gentility of her character. Through all the vicissitudes and hardships of pioneer days she never complained, nor did she even during her last illness. She was tenderly cared for during her illness by her faithful companion of nearly 70 years and by her daughters. Silently, peacefully, angels have borne her into the beautiful mansions above. There shall she rest from earth's trials forever, Safe in the arms of His infinite love. Dimmie is buried in Crown Hill Cemetery. She has reference number 003-084124N. She was a seamstress and cooked for the harvest crews.

Jacob Alber Younker was born in Ohio, near the area where Dimmie Thomas Mains was born in Kentucky. They grew up as friends and were married. Dimmie's father, William, and her step-mother came to Coldwater with Dimmie's step-brother, Henry Tatton and her half-brother, Claude. They lived on the H H Rich ranch. "Jake" and Dimmie followed them in Jan 1897, coming by train, to work on the Jim Hudson ranch. They brought with them their three daughters, Anna Elizabeth, 8 yrs., Viola Mae, 4 yrs. and Mabel, 2 yrs. In 1899, They moved to town. Their son, John William was born that year. Jake had a team and wagon and hauled salt and cedar from the Oklahoma Territory to the Coldwater area. Keeping warm in winter was often difficult. Their daughters remember being kept in bed feather mattresses for three days on one occasion during a blizzard. At various times they rented and operated farms in the county, and worked again on the Jim Hudson ranch in this county and later on the Hudson in Clark county. Probably the occupation Jake enjoyed most was carpentering. He helped Arthur Barlow build several houses in Coldwater and also went with Mr Barlow one year to build several houses in Coldwater and also, went with Mr Barlow one year to build several houses in Eureka, Kansas. Dimmi worked as a seamstress and as a cook, sometimes she cooked for harvest crews numbering as many as 20 or 25. When the "Oklahoma Strip" was opened for settles, Jake talked of "making the run" but Dimmie objected because she was afraid their children would lose the opportunity to attend school. This was important to her because her formal education had been very limited, but both she and her husband continued throughtout life to learn and be informed in politics and world affairs. Their daughter Anna married Crail Pennington and continues to live in Coldwater. Mabel married Arthur Eaton and also lives here. Their daughter "Ola" married Gus Brentson. The settled in Washington state, Gus, Ola, their son, Bruce and their daughter, Doris are deceased. Their other children live in Washington State. They are Ruth, Jack, and Don. "Bill" Younker married Mary Jewell Hughes, whom he met in Protection while he and his parents were living there. They settled in California. Bill is deceased. Jewell lives in Watsonville, California. Their children are Phyllis, John, Marietta,
