Full-text:

Charlton County Settlements: Uptonville

When Charlton County, Georgia was first organized in 1854 there were only a few family homesteads in the area. They were sprinkled throughout the piney woods along the eastern edge of the Okefenokee Swamp. The name "Uptonville" did not appear on maps of the area until around 1881, about the same time that the first railroad lines began their service to Jacksonville.

In 1898, brothers John and Ben Upton operated a large sawmill and turpentine business nearby the railroad. The workers lived in the small company town they called Uptonville. Great loads of cypress and pine logs were delivered to the sawmill at Uptonville by a tram railroad that stretched out into the pristine forests of the swamp. The logs were milled into lumber, which was shipped to points north and south from the Uptonville depot of the Savannah, Florida and Western Railroad (SF&W RR). The village was made up of about twenty families, and it supported four stores, a church and a school.

In its early days the community had an identity crisis, of sorts. The older folks had always known the place as "Spanish Creek." Then the railroad company wanted to name it "Uptonville" in honor of Ben Upton. The post office, however, did not permit names with suffixes like "-ville" or "Creek," and insisted on calling the village "Wainwright," because of the number of citizens by that surname. This confusion in turn began to cause delays in freight delivery, which sometimes mistakenly got put off at Racepond or just dumped beside the tracks. As if that wasn't enough, the tiny village was also nicknamed "Moonshine, Georgia" by the post office during a brief time around 1885.

The people of this tiny, isolated settlement were deeply involved in their church. In November 1887, 42 children and adults from Uptonville boarded the southbound train and got off at Folkston where they walked a block to the Methodist Church for the annual Sunday School Convention. It was a festive annual event when representatives of the Sunday Schools in each church in the county convened for a day of celebration. Benjamin Upton bestowed the ceremonial banner upon the Uptonville Baptists, and passed out individual badges to the delegates. Mr.

Upton himself was also a delegate to the gathering.

In 1909, the post office relented and changed the name of the town to Uptonville. Seven years later, however, postal service to the town was discontinued, and residents had to travel to Folkston to collect their mail. Postmasters of Wainwright, beginning in 1883, were Francis (Frank) D. Wainwright, William L. McDuffie, David D. Dowling, Leona B. Wainwright, Robert A.J. McDuffie and Mrs. Eyre Franks.

In 1889, there was a terrible fire in the stove flue at Newton Mizell's plantation. The kitchen, sugar house and smoke house were destroyed. Those days, most kitchens were detached from the main dwellings for a very practical purpose -- fire control. Since Mr. Mizell's home was apart from the kitchen, it survived the fire.

In 1908-1909, Uptonville businesses included D.F. Anderson's General Merchandise Store and a brickyard operated by E.J. Stafford.

In 1911, a two-room school house was built for the sum of $705.24. The building became a center for community gatherings such as church and church functions, special entertainments and school events. The kitchen was built in a separate building, for fire safety. Each homeroom had a cloak room for the coats, sweaters and lunches that the children brought from home. Students in grades one through three studied in one room, and grades four through seven in the other. Near the turn of the century, the school employed only one teacher at a time, and among those were Miss Rena Smith, Miss Marie Jennings, Perry A. Shuman and W.M. Wilson. Later, Mrs. Clara Lee Conner Roddenberry and C.W. Waughtel taught there together. Mrs. Susanne Staton Mallard owns this historic building now.

In 1914, the South Georgia Free Will Baptist Association discontinued the Uptonville Baptist Church, located in the center of the village. Mr. N. Roddenberry, Association trustee deeded the church and one acre of land to C.W. Waughtel.

In 1914, just two months after the first steamer passed through the brand-new Panama Canal, Uptonville held an election. On October 2, 1914, thirteen men of the community voted at the old Anderson Store building, and they unanimously decided to seek a charter for their tiny town.

The men voting were: Mann Bird, G.D. Daniels, Robert Daniels, Narum Dixon, A.J. Sikes, Dan Robinson, J.P. Franks, H.R. Taylor, J. Hurst, G.B. Wainwright, J.W. Wainwright, Jr., C.W. Waughtel and L.S. Waughtel. P.G. Brooks was Justice of the Peace at that time.

The charter for Uptonville became official on October 20, 1914. Soon afterwards another election was held, and the first officials were elected: C.W. Waughtel was elected Mayor and A.J. Sikes, Recorder.

The heart of Uptonville remained the train depot. Around this spot the planners drew a circle, with a perimeter that reached out three-fourths of a mile. The land was divided into 29 lots for homes and businesses. Streets with names like Orange, Oak, Bay and Pine, etc. led toward Homeland, Waycross and Newell.

The old map shows where some of the family homes were located: Anderson, Franks, Thomas, Taylor and Sikes. The railroad section foreman's house was located adjacent to the tracks.

A noteworthy thread through the history of Uptonville has been the leadership that emerged from the young people of the town. In 1927 the youth organized into the Young Folks Community Club, an active group that met weekly to work on community projects. Leaders in the group were Arline Wright, Gertie Conner, Kline Gowen and Annie Gowen.

In 1939, church services were being held in the school building. The youth of Uptonville organized themselves and proceeded to establish another church, where they began a small Sunday School group who those who loved to sing and who had a vision. They met weekly and sponsored entertainments to raise funds for building materials and a piano. With the help of Rev. Hughie Dixon, they planned and built their new church, Grace Chapel, and it has been a strong force in the community for the past sixty years.

Uptonville is known nowadays as a larger community that encompasses large farms with modern homes, and timber company interests. It is hard to find the exact spot where the homes and stores of the little village once stood; much of the area is planted in neat rows of pines. But there are still plenty of Wainwrights, Dinkins, Sikes, Brooks and Mizells living in that area, who still enjoy fishing in Spanish Creek, hunting in the same woods and singing the same old songs as their ancestors before them.

Land:
1916, Cora B. and A. M. Morgan deeded land to the trustees of the new Oak Hill Baptist Church on the old Folkston-Kingsland Road, today known as the Oak Hill Church Road west of Kingsland. Today, the church is gone but was located on the south side of the road. Only marked grave is that of grandson Paul E. Todd.

Currently, no known owner of the land the church was on.

Notes for WILLIAM M. TODD:

National Archives, "Returns from Regular Army, Coastal Artillery Companies 71 and 72 1901-1916.

The 2nd film is also from the NA, Roll 51, same title except for Co's 101 and 102, Feb 1901-1916, FHC F - 1616810; O - 0856276.

For 24 Oct 1911, the entry for William Todd shows that he re-enlisted on that date:

October 1911 Return of 72nd Company, (Mine), Coast Arty. Corps.
Gained by Re-Enlistment: TODD, William
Rank: PRVT
Date: Oct. 24/11 (1911)
Place: Ft. Screven, Ga.
Remarks: Assigned to and joined Co. from post per D & A Card dated Ft. Screven, Ga., Oct. 24/11 (1911).

Then I found a discharge entry for him on the 72nd's Co. Return for January 1913:
Todd, William, Corpl - Discharged January 1913 (no day listed)

So we know he made Corporal. And if he was a re-enlistment in 1911, it doesn't say what company he had originally been enlisted in. I didn't see his name in any earlier listings for the 72nd.

And if he was married in Sept. 1916 and it was stated that he was on leave, we should find re-enlistment, and leave or furlough entries. The records are very good and most are typed after ca. 1908 - even the written ones are very easy to read, and seemingly quite thorough.

The 72nd, a few months before William Todd re-enlisted, went to Fort Crockett, Galveston, TX for the month of March, and were still there as of the 31st when they make their official Returns. Remember that place we saw listed on a sign or something in Galveston?? They took part in routine drills and practice marches, traveling there with the G. O. 5th, Art'y, Dist. of Savannah. Surprisingly, the 101st Co., out of Fort Totten, NY, also went to this event. I can't remember - did you find info that stated he was part of the 101st or 102nd in the NY area?

William would have gone with the 72nd Co. to Fort Moultrie, SC for Battery Night Practice for almost the entire month of November, 1912, from the 18th to Nov. 30th.
